DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

1. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

2. Claims 2-14, and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention lacks patentable utility. The present invention is directed to data manipulation for the purpose of protocol analysis. For example, claim 2 recites grouping times, which comprises a calculating step and a forming step. What is recited here is an abstract idea since a practical application is lacking. The steps performed are merely data manipulation and therefore lacks physical application that produces a useful, tangible, and concrete result.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed November 30, 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that the claims are "useful" because it facilitates the validation and smooth functioning of communication systems, "concrete" because it is reproducible and predictable, and "tangible" because it corresponds to a useful, concrete or tangible thing: a protocol implementation of a communication system.

Examiner would like to point out again that the recited steps are directed to data manipulation. The end result of the recited invention, in claim 2, for example, is a set of data, i.e., the equivalence classes are formed from the similarity matrix. There is no application of the end result, and the end result does not even justify the preamble of "a method of learning a finite automaton..."; where is the "learning"? who or what has learned?

Applicant's disclosure in the specification may be useful, but the claims do not recite any post solution activity or physical transformation of the manipulated data. Claims do not include application of the end result regarding validation and smooth functioning of communication systems. The claims do not produce concrete result because the end results are numbers or logic conditions, which are abstract ideas lacking a practical application. The claims are not tangible, and the steps recited do not specifically relate the end result to protocol implementation of a communication system.

Therefore, examiner's position is maintained with regard to the rejection under 35 USC 101.

Conclusion

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
